President's Message

Is a decrease in pollinators affecting our morning coffee?! Now you have our attention. So why are pollinators important? It's not just about flowers as we may have previously thought.

It is estimated that more than 1,300 types of plants are grown around the world for food, beverages (yes, coffee), medicines, condiments, spices and even fabric. Of these, about 75% are pollinated by animals. More than one of every three bites of food we eat or beverages we drink are directly because of pollinators. Indirectly, pollinators ultimately play a role in the majority of what we eat and consume. - Joe Lamp'l, Growing a Greener World, The Importance of Pollinators

Our May program focuses on our VIPs, Very Important Pollinators. Mary Jo Fleming will give a presentation designed to provide MGs with information needed to help with planting and maintaining our pollinator garden at the Northern Wisconsin State Fair and for sharing the message about the importance of pollinator habitat when volunteering at our booth during fair week, July 13-17, 2016. Both of these activities and attendance at the May meeting count toward MG volunteer and education hours.

Have you ever heard this from a friend or relative? "You are a Master Gardener. You should know all about X,Y,Z!". I certainly have. Perhaps Master Gardener Volunteers will agree that while our 30 hours of training and 10 annual hours of continuing education have given us a solid core of knowledge about gardening we are by no means experts on all, or on even a single topic. Sometimes we know just enough to know how much we don't know! But what we each are, is experts at using our base of information, and our ability to access resources to help people find answers to their gardening questions and to take on gardening projects of all types.

This month we have had requests for Master Gardener Volunteers to: help with setting up a rain garden; provide guidance for organizing a plant swap and sale and a container planting lunch-and-learn, and to present basic vegetable gardening information to novice gardeners. (See the Volunteer Opportunities section of this newsletter.) None of these requests come with the expectation that the MG volunteer will do all the work, but that they will help steer the requesting organization toward the information and resources needed to make their projects successful. Even if you do not have a lot of time to give, consider helping these projects get off the ground by meeting with their organizers to find out what they need to get started. Often it is just a little push in the right direction.

And if a bit of financial aid is needed for the success of a project we can help with that too. The Volunteer Project Grant application is included with this newsletter. It is intended to help Master Gardener Volunteers working as a minimum group of three by giving a monetary boost if needed to undertake projects worthy of accomplishing CVMGA educational objectives. Any current MGV may apply.

Happy May! Get in to those gardens! And, as Ms. Frizzle* always says, "Take chances, make mistakes, get messy!"

Laura Kasdorf, CVMGA Co-President
